4 Keys to Driving Bigger Gifts

I am always interested in seeing the results of the US Trust Study of High Net Worth Philanthropy and, more specifically, the reasons those being surveyed cite for making a gift.

The top four reasons:

1. Belief in the mission of the organization.
2. Belief my gift can make a difference.
3. Personal satisfaction.
4. Giving to the same organization each year.

All of these reasons point to a few key points.

First, your organization must have, as its focus, an area that resonates with the donor. That is, to a very large degree, outside of your control, but do donors and potential donors fully understand your mission? Reinforcing that mission, why it's important and how it's different from other like organizations is critical to gaining and retaining donors' dollars. Stay top of mind through communication efforts that highlight your mission.

It is incumbent to determine, define and detail how a gift makes a difference-what is the impact? When we make a case for a funding opportunity, we must always articulate-specifically-how that gift makes a difference.
