Help: Giving Tuesday Has Hijacked My Inbox

by David H. King
President & CEO

Let me start by saying that we at Alexander Haas are strong advocates for Giving Tuesday and anything else that promotes the growth and expansion of philanthropy.

But (and you knew that was coming), I'm sitting here on Tuesday, November 28, watching my inbox fill up with Giving Tuesday solicitations. I quit counting them when it got to 35 by 10 a.m. Some of these are organizations that I've already made my annual gift to for 2023. Some are organizations that I have not supported in years. I received a solicitation from two organizations (including what seems like one an hour from one of them) to whom my only gift – ever – was a memorial gift for a friend who passed away. At this point, it is only 10:51 as I type this; I have moved on to just deleting them unread. And they are still pouring in.

I will acknowledge that, by virtue of my 30 years of working with nonprofits, I'm probably in more nonprofit databases than the average person. With that said, what I have noticed about the ones that I have read is that they are basically all the same. Essentially, they are asking me to give because it is Giving Tuesday. They are not making a case that they are worthy of the gift. They are not making the case that they are addressing a real need in a meaningful way. They are not telling me about their aspirations and plans that my support will help them to fulfill. Nope, they are telling me that I should give because it is Giving Tuesday. It reminds me of calls I get from time to time from organizations who tell me, "Next year is our 50th anniversary, so we want to have a big capital campaign". When I ask what the campaign will fund, the answer is usually, "We have not figured that out yet, but we want to have a campaign." Folks, the marking of an anniversary – no matter how significant – is not in and of itself a compelling reason to give. And frankly, neither is the fact that it is the Tuesday after Thanksgiving.

Giving Tuesday has led some to abandon critical aspects of effective fundraising. Number one is – you must have a compelling case for support. I think in the rush to "get in on" Giving Tuesday, many organizations' strategy is to simply bombard people with email and remind them that it is Giving Tuesday. I wonder how long that will continue to work?

As I said in the open, I support Giving Tuesday. Spotlighting philanthropy is a very good thing. However, solicitation messaging has become routine for many, and the focus is on the volume rather than the quality of communication. It is time to get back to making the case and using some creativity to capitalize on Giving Tuesday.

By the way, I have vowed not to open any social media today, as I know it is going to be consumed with Giving Tuesday appeals.

Donor Participation Dropped in '22

In 2022, the U.S. nonprofit sector saw a 1.7% decline in total giving, a 10% drop in the number of donors, and a 3.5% decrease in retention rates. A report from Independent Sector found that while roughly 90% of the drop in donors was among those giving less than $500 annually, the number of major ($5,000 to $50,000) and supersize (more than $50,000) donors also fell by 3.1% and 2.1%, respectively.

Other Key Findings

- 52% of the respondents indicated they trust what the non-profit does is right, down 7 percentage points from 2020.
- 39% of survey respondents who said their personal financial situation was “getting worse” trusted nonprofits, compared to 67% of those who said it was “getting better.”
- 31% of nonprofits reported engaging in advocacy or lobbying in 2022, a significantly smaller percentage than 20 years ago, despite 90% of the public supporting nonprofits educating policymakers on communities.
- 48.5% of nonprofits reported increasing staff workloads to meet rising demands for services in 2023.
- Nearly two-thirds of nonprofit employees over 25 hold a bachelor’s degree or higher, nearly 20% struggled to afford basic necessities in 2021.

Giving Rates Fell Across Racial/Ethnic Groups

Giving rates to all types of charities, including religious organizations, decreased among all racial and ethnic groups studied over an 18-year span, but there were variations in the timing and extent of these declines.

A report from the Indiana University Lilly Family School of Philanthropy found that the decline in giving rates among communities of color can be partially attributed to economic factors, including recessions, and placed overall giving rates in two categories: pre-recession (2000-08) and post-recession (2008-18). Before the recession, the most substantial drop in overall giving rates was observed in American Indian households—a decline of 11 percentage points, which after the recession narrowed to 7 percentage points, making it the smallest decrease among racial and ethnic groups.

Overall giving by Asian American households before the recession rose 8 percentage points, the most out of all groups. After the recession, Asian American giving declined by 21 percentage points, the most significant reduction after Hispanic Americans, who experienced a 23-percentage point decrease. NPD, 11-17

DAF Grants More Than Double in Five Years

Total grant dollars awarded through donor-advised funds (DAFs) has more than doubled in the past five years, according to a study from the National Philanthropic Trust annual Donor-Advised Fund Report. The report found that in 2022, the value of grants from DAFs to charities worldwide totaled $52.16 billion—an increase of 9% year-over-year and 119% since 2018. Contributions to DAFs also grew 9% to $85.53 billion, and the number of DAF accounts rose 2.9% to 1.95 million.

The total value of DAF assets stood at $228.89 billion in 2022, up 85% since 2018, despite falling 1.1% due to market volatility. The aggregate grantmaking payout rate declined to 22.5% from the record 27.3% set in 2021 but remained well above the typical 5% annual payout of private foundations. NPD, 11-17
